

RANI DREW is a poet, playwright and short story writer. She has written for stage and radio, and has produced plays in the U.K., China, Hungary, Romania, Spain and Macedonia. Her work has been published in North American, English and Indian poetry and fiction magazines. DREW has travelled widely, teaching in universities in Singapore, China and Hungary. During 1999/2000 she lectured at the University of Pécs where she taught theatre workshops, English literature, psychoanalysis and gender studies. One of her plays, Caliban, a sequel to Shakespeare's The Tempest was given a reading performance by the Blue Elephant Theatre in London and Shakespeare and Me has also been translated into Hungarian.

THE DOG'S TALE

A Life in the Buda Hills

AUTHOR RANI DREW WILL BE READING FROM HER
NEW BOOK OF SHORT STORIES SET IN HUNGARY

Milleniumi Kávéház
Thursday, 12 May 2011, 17:00

All lovers of literature and the English language are most welcome!

The small dog, Bela, is rescued as a puppy and raised by a young woman and her mother in the Buda hills overlooking Budapest. He observes, listens and learns about the world around him and his life is full and happy until circumstances change. He hears the call of the wild and must make a decision...